

CARL WOLZ 1932-2002 IN MEMORIAM

From Andrea Snyder, Dance USA:

Carl Wolz passed away on Wednesday, January 2, 2002 around 2pm in New York. He was in the hospital for almost 4 weeks. There will be a memorial for Carl at his church, The Park Avenue Christian Church, on Monday February 4, 2002 at 6:30 p.m.. The church is located on Madison Avenue at 85th Street.

Carl's ashes will be interred near his parents, per his wishes. Ilene Fox, of the Dance Notation Bureau, said there will be a memorial service for Carl in NYC. A date will be set far enough in advance to allow out of town/country friends to attend. Ilene hopes that a memorial fund would be set up in Carl's name at the Dance Notation Bureau. Perhaps something can also be established in the World Dance Alliance, which Carl contributed to in such a very important way.

CARL WOLZ

Carl Wolz was born in St Louis, Missouri on December 29, 1932 and after service in the U.S. Navy during the Korean War attended the University of Chicago where he majored in Art History and also began a serious study of dance. After Chicago, he went to the Juilliard School and danced with the Lucas Hoving Dance Company in New York. In 1962, he received a fellowship from the East West Center to study Asian Dance at the University of Hawaii. He went for two years and stayed for twenty. During that time he developed a multi-faceted program in dance at the University of Hawaii and organised the Hawaii State Dance Council which is still functioning today.

In 1983 he was appointed Dean of Dance at the newly established Hong Kong Academy for Performing Arts. During this time he also began to organise the Asia Pacific Dance Alliance which later grew into the World Dance Alliance. In 1993 he accepted a Professorship in the Graduate Program of the Japan Women's College of Physical Education. His contract ended in March 1998, at which time he returned to his home in St Louis where he taught at Washington University and continued his position as Executive Director of the World Dance Alliance.

Carl has choreographed over sixty works; has written books and articles on Asian Dance; has received awards from CORD, the University of Chicago, the University of Hawaii, the Hong Kong Academy for Performing Arts; and was a Fellow of the International Council of Kinetography Laban.

Carl died in New York city on 2 January, 2002. He is survived by his brother, Lee Wolz of Houston, Texas.

RECALLING CARL

by Basilio Esteban S. Villaruz
WDA-Asia Pacific President

Larger visions are harder to comprehend. These may even be viewed with suspicion. But Carl Wolz had both, his wild dreaming and his questioning.

In both physical stature and vision, Carl can remind all of us of Cervantes' Don Quixote. In the ballet, he is not the star but the title. It is his story, his questing and his jousting with windmills. He has a book (as Dr Coppelius had), a kind of bible to keep his faith intact and speak about what he had in mind.

What was it with Carl? First, it went beyond every man's yearning to be a great dancer, choreographer or founder of a noted company. Carl did become dancer and choreographer, but he saw in dance something more: the art and the people committed to dance as both artistic and social agency. So he also became a scholar and administrator, and that brought him out East (in the footsteps of Pavlova, St. Denis, Shawn, etc.).

It was to those 'little' places like Hawaii and Hong Kong he went. For someone from St Louis and New York, those were quite exotic yet unknown territories, beyond his Western tradition in dance. In between, he also got a bite of Japan (he spoke Japanese) where he studied and taught, and further on, made fond friends with experts in Asian dance.

By the time he was in Hong Kong/China, East was no longer a geographic identification. Perhaps at first it was terra incognita that came to be the cradle of a larger world for global dance, calling for a united front. Carl wanted all territorial directions and all disciplinary divisions to meet. Cervantes' perigrinating picaro, indeed! In his mind and actions.

Out in Hong Kong, he not only became dean of dance at the Academy for the Performing Arts. He also asked the young and old to meet, living out his art as a mission, uniting time and space to bring out a dynamism which we all have experienced with him.

First, he gathered the Chinese to form them into an association, and consolidate their affiliations

Then he started adding invitations to the rest of Asia and the Pacific, all the way to the US West Coast. It must have been hard going, inasmuch as borders here and there are defined by isolating waters, differing (if not opposite) political, religious, cultural backgrounds, and with all-too-easy questions like 'How's that?' asked especially of an outsider-catalyst. But he managed — persistent in his convictions.

Don Quixote got a bit more ambitious and would not settle for less than his Dulcinea, a global personification. In 1990 he turned the meeting in HK truly international, not just in performing and conferring but also in notating dance. Added to the conference and his concept of Festival of Dance Academies, there was also a conference among all recognised movement notation systems. I remember running from one session to another, between standard dance subjects to notation systems. I even brought my university group to complete my involvement. It was our first trip abroad.

From there onward, unfortunately because of distrust over success in his homeground, Carl had to move the conference-festivals around. Fortunately, it was also tactful because the different countries took initiatives on their own — with Carl as dance-conscience.

First, to Manila, and it was the first of its kind in the Philippines (repeated in 1998). Then to Taipei, Tokyo, Kuala Lumpur, Beijing, Seoul, Melbourne, Jakarta and last year to Singapore, where we paid a long-belated tribute to Carl. There had been 'repeat performances' in some places (including a return to HK in 1997), one of them soon in Taipei in 2003. This is to be chaired by Yun-yu Wang Chen of Colorado, with involvement of CORD, ICKL and Dance Notation Bureau. For this Carl had been conferring with us to his last days. He was that assiduous.

It was really in 1990 that the Asia Pacific Dance Alliance became global, although the dating with the WDA name is made from 1995 in Korea. But back in HK, there were representatives from many notation systems of the world, from the CID and the ITI, and I remember well Kapila Vatsyayan from India.

With the founding of WDA-Americas and WDA-Europe, the global linkages were rounded off. Thereafter there were global assemblies in Philadelphia and Tokyo (2000, thanks to Miki Wakamatsu, first WDA-AP Asian president), and this August in Duesseldorf. Last year Singapore was brave to take up the Asia Pacific conference in less than a year's preparation. We were very lucky to have had Carl still with us, and he did not look sick, for all his running around at most events and in-between meetings from breakfast to night.

Started in Singapore was the well-coordinated development of the structures of the five dance networks: education and training, choreography and performance, research and documentation, status and welfare, and management and promotion.

It took a long, long time to define these divisions (and to clarify them), and much of that was laid down by Carl in 2001. These networks provide structure for the actual implementation of dance concerns in intersecting parts of an organisation.

Through Carl's orchestration, it was decided that, aside from the identifiable geographic regions/centers (the Americas, Europe and Asia Pacific), there would be interdisciplinary networking. Moreover, Carl's dream (and of those who came to believe in Carl's vision) was to further include Russia, Africa and the Middle East.

Will those of us left behind rally to the challenge of finding a United Nations in Dance? Is this a fugitive dream? Especially for dance people whose art is ever ephemeral and fleeting?

But as one of my Filipino notation students said (before she went into the stock-exchange in Los Angeles), dance is more than (just) dancing. There is more to steps and stages, more to creating and recreating dance. It is about instilling a commitment to dance itself.

Dance is culture. It is an obsession (for others as well as dance people), to consciously and unconsciously make sense of both inner and outer life through art. It is not divorced from life but taking stock of experiences by way of dancing, and dancing to make life manifest to both self and audience, us and others. As we do and watch, we are all together.

Such was Carl's vision, somehow threatened by his dying. But his example and our exchanges with him should challenge us to continue and expand his work — our work which he helped define with and for us. His vision is worthy of our incarnating on stage and in field explorations, in our bodies and the body that is World Dance Alliance. Carl's gift to the world!

P.S: When WDA-AP paid a tribute to Carl ('Waltzing with Wolz') last June, Singapore and the Philippines also made a salute to the sterling contribution of Tony Llacer. Long a ballet master-choreographer there, he was both that and a dancer in New York, Los Angeles, etc. Back in Manila, he served the Anita M. Kane (a New Zealander) Ballet, Dance Theatre Philippines, Ballet Philippines, Dance Arts Studios and Karilagan-Philippines. In Singapore he produced notable instructional material on Balanchine-styled allegro, available in video-film and Benesh system. The loss of Tony last December 2001 has left a vacuum in the lives of dancers in Singapore today. They staged a performance in his honour in July.

Here is a picture of Carl in the summer of 2001 in Singapore (above). I was sitting on one side of him and Steve Basilio was sitting on the other side of Tony Llaser who died on December 29, days before Carl.

I have worked with Carl for nearly 15 years. I miss his emails, and his presence will be certainly missed in Düsseldorf. It seems as if the whole world grieves with me.

Ilona Copen Executive Director, New York International Ballet Competition (NYIBC) President, International Dance Committee ITI - UNESCO Vice President, World Dance Alliance Americas - WDA

Last evening the memorial service was held for Carl at the Park Avenue Christian Church. The Reverend Suzanne Webb opened the service with beautiful words. The Church was filled with a wonderful spiritual feeling and I felt the nearness of Carl and the nearness of all his friends from all parts of the world.

I read messages from Jetty Roels, board member WDA Europe, Basilio Esteban Villaruz (Steve), President WDA Asia-Pacific and Grant Strate, President WDA Americas. Then I said a few words of my own. I was followed by Irwin Dennis who spoke for his relationship with Carl.

Saeko Ichinohe then performed an exquisite dance 'Wakare' (Farewell). It was very touching and as she danced you could feel the coming together of everyone who attended.

Carol Walker read a message from Phyllis Haskel. Afterwards, she introduced two young dancers from her school and they performed 'An Assignment for Composition 2 Class'. The choreography was by Peng-Yu Chen and it was danced by Peng-yu and Li-Chuan Lin. It was very affirming to have these talented young people perform. Carol then said words of her own about Carl and the great effect he had on her and so many of us.

Ilene Fox then read a message from the Oda/Homsey/Woomer family. Ilene also spoke about Carl and shared with us many aspects of their relationship. She also read a message from Carl's brother Lee Wolz.

The ceremony ended with the Reverend Doctor Suzanne Webb who summed up the Memorial in the most meaningful and beautiful way. She touched the hearts and spirit of all who attended.

There was a reception immediately following and we all had coffee and goodies as we would have with Carl.

I wanted to share the proceedings with all of you who could not be with us in body, but were with us in spirit. I look forward to seeing all of you in the future and hopefully at the WDA Global Assembly in August.

With warm regards, Ilona

Messages to WDA about sharing memories of Carl:

If it is not too painful to write, to recall his memories, it will help us grow in the pain of his absence and make something positive out of this loss, for we should not forget who he was and what he wanted.

I hope everyone is informed about the memorial that will be in New York on February 4. I do not know yet for sure if I will be able to attend. I hope that it will be possible to use the texts that have been written already and that the ones that other dance friends are going write will be read at the service. Is that possible Ilene?

Please communicate your feelings and ideas by sending a group mail with suggestions. I hope this group may help all of us to express our feelings about Carl and create together something positive for the future.

– Jetty Roels WDA Belgium, 28 Jan 2002
Email jetty.roels@skynet.be

I think having this group mail is a wonderful way of easily disseminating information among those of us who have been involved with WDA and Carl. I know Carl wanted to personally keep in touch with everyone, but this will save you & others much time and effort, and apprise those of us who relied heavily on Carl for news, etc. to remain 'in the loop.' Thank you for doing it.

– Ruth Solomon

I fully understand how difficult it is not to feel sad and empty when the memory of Carl comes back and forth as we try to continue with our daily rituals. I have not been able to say anything so far in this forum but to read all the wonderful letters and notes coming from our friends from all over the world. Your effort of creating this message box for all of us is a noble one. You have kept the spirit of togetherness and continuity amongst all of us as we forge forward to reach the goals that we have set.

In particular, I must say is the spirit of up-keeping the Networks to function as constructive entities. On a personal note, I feel that had it not been for Carl's unending encouragements and support, I would have not gained so many friends in the world of dance, thus linking our interest (as in this case 'dance research and documentation') amidst all the other discourses of knowledge in dance that have now crossed our paths. Thus, in spite of the sadness we should not allow our togetherness be diminished with the feeling of emptiness but to make the memory of Carl as the confluence of greater achievements in the near future.

– Mohd Anis Md Nor, WDA Malaysia

Thank you so much for your reaction. It is very helpful for me to receive words from you. I did set up this mail forum because I did not know what to do with the sadness of others like Miki and Ilene and Sonal and Prakriti, or my own.

I myself am new to this kind of work. English is not my mother tongue. I do my best! Now it looks like this group could maybe also keep us a little bit together. That is something. Work in the future, that is another thing.

I cannot see Carl's place being taken by anything or anyone else, and I am afraid of the absence of his gentle guidance.

So I think we have to inspire each other like he inspired us. We also have to overcome the sadness of losing his presence, knowledge, vision, his sincere engagement and his very special personality that made us want to be like he was: open-minded and all-inclusive, like Judy described it.

– Jetty roels

It took me a while to get used to all of these sentiments on email but as I think about the world wide ability for all of us to talk to each other — it is astounding and Carl would whole-heartedly approve. I want to add to all the beautiful, funny, meaningful, etc. thoughts about Carl that Ilene was fabulous. She was a brick throughout all of the hospital visits. Senta was also remarkable. Rosanna Seravallie was there a lot and so was Rudy of course. So very many people were able to be there, Jack, Takako, etc., but without Ilene we would have all been out of touch — calling a million times to find out information or mis-information. Ilene also arranged for the church for the memorial, contacted very important people who needed to know and organised us as a crew so the event happened flawlessly. Ilene — Thank you more than we can say. You made this Carl community in New York and elsewhere feel connected. Please let us know if we can ever do anything for you.

– Carol K. Walker, Dean of Dance,
Conservatory of Dance, Purchase College

Carl's memorial was well handled, with loving friends speaking and reading messages, then a small gathering for coffee and sweet things, the kinds of things he liked. It was held at the church which Jack attends (I stay home Sunday mornings!) and which Carl had been attending for just a year. It's a beautiful space (gothic style) with a splendid minister of whom we are all very fond, and who made a strong impression on all who attended.

– George Dorris

I surely did think of you at the memorial service yesterday. You seemed to be there, and Carl most definitely was. It was a warm, profound moment, filled with Carl's humour, too. Saeko Ichinohe danced beautifully. Carol Walker's two dancers from the school were wonderful, as well. All of the remarks were so helpful, as we transfer the weight and joy of Carl's work to our collective shoulders. May we see one another often and soon.

– Madeleine Nichols, NYPL

Hi Adrienne,

Your message was so lovely. I am sure that you know about Judy and UH doing a memorial for Carl this weekend. He was so loved by so many. Ilene has graciously agreed to read a family statement at Carl's memorial for the Oda and Homseys. My mom was devastated. Like you, her friendship with Carl began in 1962. For me, he was the best 'dance dad' and continued his mentoring to the end.

I have replaced Barbara Horgan as Chair of Dance for the Princess Grace Foundation in NYC and it allowed me to see Carl annually. I treasure our last breakfast together. Yasuki was also in town.

The challenge remains for all of us, whom he touched, to build upon the goodwill and selflessness that he brought to the dance community. Huge shoes to fill!

– Bonnie Oda Homsey

As the President of the World Dance Alliance Americas, I speak for all its members in expressing my deep sorrow that Carl Wolz is no longer with us. His passing is a great loss, not only to this organisation, but to all of us who were fortunate enough to know him. WDA International was spawned from his personal dream, and his sincere belief that dance has the power to enrich our lives, heal our wounds and placate our adversaries. Carl was a man of many talents, talents which could have led him into more comfortable directions than the path he chose. It is to our great benefit that Carl elected to be an advocate for dance in all its forms, throughout the world.

Carl's generosity and his commitment to the cause of dance never wavered during his leadership of the World Dance Alliance, despite the many obstacles that had to be hurdled along the way. To keep in close contact with a membership that crosses borders and oceans and to mediate the many cultural differences endemic to all international organisations is no mean task. But Carl managed to achieve all this with grace and understanding.

So Carl, we thank you for all you have contributed and the legacy you have left for us to follow. Rest well, knowing the ideals you represent will always be honoured. To this we are all committed.

Carl Wolz came to meet me in the dressing room of Tokyo Bunka Kaikan to introduce himself. Since that time, I often saw him at various venues in Tokyo where contemporary dance performances were held and we became friends. Ever since he organised the International Dance Festival in Hong Kong, I was fascinated by his personality and talent, and had supported him as much as I could.

The World Dance Alliance (WDA) festivals that he promoted during his lifetime did much to inspire dance in Asia, promote international exchanges, attract new audiences, greatly stimulate dance education as well as provide economic benefit to the hosting country. Although it is a small one, a WDA festival can have an economic benefit of at least $500,000 on the hosting country. If it attracts 200 visitors from abroad, an additional $300,000 can be expected. For the past 15 years, it is estimated that the festivals have generated at least $12,000,000.

This American friend of mine accomplished the great task alone. Also, he made being an American in Asia work as a plus for the WDA. He was born in the Bible Belt. He was honest and tireless. He worked wholeheartedly. For five years after 1993, he taught at Japan Women's College of Physical Education as professor. He suggested we meet once a month. He used to go to his office at 7:30 in the morning every day, including Sundays and holidays to work. In his third year at college, he got cancer. When he was released from the hospital, having lost his hair, he continued to work for WDA. I tried to help him, but I could not help him as much as I wanted to.

He went back to the US, but whenever opportunities arose, he came to Tokyo. He did not have much of an income, but he never asked for money. I did everything I could to help him financially, but it did not bring him additional income.

When the terrorists attacked New York, he emailed me. He wanted to come to Japan. But he could not make it. I am sure that he will live on through the young and excellent people he has inspired to continue this WDA project. But he is no longer here in this world and part of me feels dead, too.

Of Many Legacies: Carl Wolz's dream to create global dance understanding via the Research and Documentation Network

(Mohd Anis Md Nor)

The 1996 Annual General Meeting of the World Dance Alliance Asia Pacific (WDA-AP) in Jakarta was a turning point in Carl's dream to bring about world peace through dance research and documentation. The social and political events that took place during that one-week period were graphic examples of how mankind could easily forget tradition when faced with the pressures of politics and livelihood. Carl took the opportunity to point out our vulnerability within our cocoons of tradition and culture. His main contention was that I should not take things for granted, and that avoiding the responsibility of organising and spearheading the research network in WDA-AP was unbecoming of a person who yearned to share his dreams. It was especially poignant that the person he was referring to was a former student of his in Hawaii. His message to me was loud and clear.

Within the week of the meeting, the Research Network of WDA-AP was put in place with the establishment of the Asia Pacific Dance Research Society (APDRS), a vehicle for the propagation of dance research in the region. I was made pro-tem chair of the steering committee while each of the WDA-AP chapter heads and a few other members stood as committee members. The formation of the APDRS, and then the Research and Documentation Network in Tokyo in 2000, contributed to the realisation of Carl's dream and goal, to generate awareness of dance as a means for peace among all people on earth.

Since his teaching days at the University of Hawaii (1965–1983), Carl had always wanted to see dance recognised as more than just another artistic event or a structured movement system to be studied. He was able to see the many facets of dance as tangible denominators of humanity that permeated the cultures and traditions of the past, present and future. He did his best to evolve such dreams while he was a member of the Hawaii State Dance Council, where dances from Asia, the Pacific and the Americas were part and parcel of the Hawaiian face.

His yearly Ballet, Modern and non-Western dance productions at the University ran for twenty years (1963-1983), manifesting his dreams on stage.

His research in Japan as dance notator and researcher of the ancient dances and music of pure Japanese origin (Gagaku), and the dances of Noh theatre, took him on an intercultural study of dance that was to become a foundation stone towards creating global dance understanding through performance, research and documentation. His vast experience of friendship and tutelage have included La Meri and Matteo, Ho'oulu Cambra (Hula), Koishiro Nishikawa (Japanese dance), Soedarsono (Javanese dance), Halla Pai Huhm (Korean dance), Yoshino Nakasone (Okinawan dance), Masataro Togi (Bugaku), Kanjuro Fujima and Hanayagi Chiyo (Nihon Buyo), Shimai (Noh) and Mototaro Inoue (Umewaka).

Moving to Hong Kong in 1983, Carl further pursued his dream through the dance programs of the Hong Kong Academy for Performing Arts. He not only encouraged the local and international interfacing of dance through master classes and workshops, but also tried to connect with dancers and dance scholars from China and Taiwan. He planted his dream firmly in the dance festivals of the Asia Pacific Dance Academies (APDA), the forerunner of WDA-AP. With connections already in place through friendships with Korean, Japanese, Chinese, Indian and Southeast-Asian dancers and scholars, he completed the formation of a global dance community with friends and fans in America and Europe.

The metamorphosis of WDA-AP from APDA was a natural progression of intellectual and artistic strategies to embrace mankind within the greater entity of the dancing world. Carl's dreams became a source of inspiration for others within WDA-AP, WDA-Americas and WDA Europe-Africa, as they worked to concretise many of his ideas. One example was the Research and Documentation Network, now encompassing the three regional bodies, as it began to take shape - communicating and positing new ways of interacting and interfacing current works that would embrace the past and future of dance research.

Since the historic days of the 1996 WDA-AP AGM and the Indonesian Dance Festival, the Research Network has moved along the spectrum of dreams that was Carl's, making dance research in an open but well guided dance organisation, real and living. Carl was able to witness two publications by the Research Network, 'Asia Pacific Dance Research Society Database' (1999) and 'Asian Dance: Voice of the Millennium' (2000), which not only brought a lot of joy to him but to members within the network as well. Carl was also instrumental in guiding the Network Chairperson in proposing paper panels and research topics to be presented at the WDA-AP meetings in Asia, and the Global Assemblies in America and Japan.

Carl envisioned his dreams would become real through the efforts of other selfless people, who would set aside the necessary time and space, to contribute to the quest for global understanding in and through dance. Carl has left us an imprint of a person dedicated to the cause of world peace through dance and in particular, the use of dance research and documentation as perpetual records of our quest to achieve the goals we have set. Carl's generous efforts to achieve global understanding in dance through research and documentation are indeed a legacy amongst many that he had in his lifetime.

It was my great privilege to be Carl's first notation teacher — or rather to introduce him to the subject, as he truly learned the system on his own. His quiet but brilliant mind simply could not go at the pace of most of my students. In addition, family illnesses had kept him out of class most of the year.

Being contemporaries, and wanting to explore Labanotation concepts in depth, we soon became fast friends. I quickly understood and developed an awe for his extraordinary mind and, more to the point, the depth of his humanity. He truly cared about people and carried with him a kind of spiritual aura which I could only admire from afar. He was a man deeply at peace with himself. He possessed a rare quality, for he was able to get disparate people to work together. He has done so much to heal wounds and bring together our contentious field. While no one can ever take his place, we must try to find the strength and sagacity to fulfil his dream.

'Think global, act local' has become a cliché in our self-conscious internationalised world of the 21st century. But Carl Wolz devoted much of his life to attaining this as a reality in dance, long before networking, partnerships, connectivity and interactivity became buzz words.

Carl was a visionary and an idealist but one who turned ideas and visions into practical outcomes. He squarely faced the ongoing challenges of forging lasting relationships between cultures, dance genres and philosophies, through the formation of the World Dance Alliance, at first in the Asia Pacific region where he spent a great deal of his life, and then in the Americas and Europe.

Carl was devoted to his global dance family (as he used to call it) but at times we were a difficult and frustrating lot as in any family: disagreement, apathy, cynicism and unruliness would take hold. But it could not last, for Carl's unshakeable belief in the unifying power of dance, his optimism, tenacity, persuasiveness and gentle humour, was infectious. Carl inspired confidence in grand visions and pride in quiet achievements. He had the rare ability to make every individual with whom he came in contact feel special and valued, whatever their contribution. This he partially achieved through his prodigious ability to communicate individually to vast numbers of people on a regular basis.

Carl lived the aesthetics of diversity — valuing difference whilst affirming commonalities. He possessed the soul and sensitivity of an artist, the mind and curiosity of an educator and the prodigious energy of youth. His ambition was expansive, being for dance and not for himself.

Above all, Carl embodied the spirituality of dance - spirituality in its broadest sense - the transforming power of the human spirit through and in dance. We will miss you terribly Carl and sometimes wonder how to keep your WDA dream alive without your leadership. But your spirit will be with us and your gentle insistence to keep communicating in and through dance will be ever present.

Carl's Australian friends were deeply saddened to hear of his death in January after a long and brave struggle with cancer, an illness which seemed to make him all the more determined to see realised his dream of a truly inclusive world dance alliance.

Carl was a wonderful friend and supporter of all those in the Asia-Pacific region who shared his vision for a communicating dance world, completely inclusive of all practitioners, cultures and countries. Those Australians who attended the 1996 Green Mill conference in Melbourne will remember a persuasively gentle man of enormous vision and knowledge. He attended the last regional meeting in Singapore, where he was frail but very much involved, and his unique sense of humour was always there to see us through the occasional difficult moments.

Below is the last letter received by Ausdance from Carl. It is reprinted here, indicating that Carl was forever looking to the future. Best wishes and thank you to all those who looked after Carl during his final weeks.

Dear Julie

The AUSDANCE Dance Forum just arrived. Thank you so much for keeping me on the mailing list. And, thank you for the kind words in your report on the WDA Asia Pacific Assembly in Singapore. I thought the meetings on the WDA Networks were excellent and augurs well for future development. I am working on Guidelines for the Networks and as soon as I have comments from the WDA Presidents' Committee I will send them around to Network Chairs and members.

It has been a busy summer with progress being made on several mini projects. The new season in New York promises to be very exciting. The problem is that there is always so much one doesn't have time, energy, or money to do most of it. This is not a complaint!

Plans are also moving ahead for the WDA 5th Global Assembly in Düsseldorf next summer and Bertram assures me that the First Announcement will be ready soon and then distributed worldwide.

Please give my best wishes to all my friends there.
Much love, Carl

I was so sad to hear of Carl's passing. We have all watched him growing frailer over the years, and wondered how he could possibly continue to get through the vast amount of he undertook on behalf of dance and in promotion of his dream of international co-operation.

Now it's happening, and has become his invaluable legacy.

Carl helped me so much when I took over editorship of WDA Asia-Pacific Channels from him, and I feel honoured to have received his friendship and support.

International dance has lost a major figure. We must treasure and nurture his legacy — international understanding through the medium of dance.

What an exceptional gentleman was Carl. He truly loved the art form and truly gave his all. In his quiet way he inspired, gave direction, had the patience to wait for others, had the remarkable vision of a global dance alliance working not only for dance and dance artists, but for world harmony. Thanks to him, artists of all nationalities are communicating.

A truly remarkable achievement by a truly remarkable man.

*'Vision without action is merely a dream
Action without vision is just passing the time
Vision with Action can change the world'*

Carl was a man of 'vision with action' ...a true champion of dance. I was one of the lucky ones to have been inspired by him.

Carl came into my life some 20 years ago when he was Chair of the Department of Dance at the University of Hawaii. Tall and slender, he towered over me. I respected him for he was the one who made studying dance at the university a possibility. Admittedly I was also afraid of him, as I was a young 16-year-old and small – a mere 4'10" girl. When I later saw him dance with Phyllis Haskell in a duet for the Waltz Project however, he surprised me with his wit and demure. My little girl fears were dispelled.

Many years later when Carl was Dean of Dance at the then newly established Hong Kong Academy for Performing Arts I came under his towering presence again. This time I travelled with my colleagues Peggy Gaither and Carlyn Tani for a festival fringe performance at the HKAPA. The HKAPA and the festival both were testimonies to Carl's undying vision for dance.

I was not to see Carl again until many years later in Korea and Japan for the World Dance Alliance conference in August 2000, and later in June 2001 at the World Dance Alliance annual Asia-Pacific conference in Singapore, an event he urged me to organise. The conference paid tribute to Carl as founder of the World Dance Alliance. I once again realised the enormity of this man's heart and vision. He was both loved and respected. I reflected on my present position as Head of Dance at LASALLE-SIA College of the Arts in Singapore and found inspiration and strength from Carl, the man who started it all for me. I said thank you and farewell for the last time. He will always be an inspiration... my champion...our champion.

It is with great sadness that we heard the news of the untimely demise of a dear friend and benefactor of dance. The Malaysia Chapter of WDA Asia Pacific wishes to extend our heartfelt sympathy and condolences to the family and friends of Carl. The Malaysia Chapter owes its existence and growth to the vision of this great man. Carl initiated, cajoled, encouraged and convinced the members of the necessity to interact and communicate on a global level. It is a fitting tribute to him that we attend and participate at these numerous events on a global scale. Those of us who knew him personally will feel a great loss, for a gentleman of such kindness and understanding is a rare but great gift from God. May his soul rest in peace.

Mr Carl Wolz, founder-president of WDA died of Cancer in New York on 2nd Jan. 2002. May his Dancing Soul Rest in Eternal Peace in the Divine Presence of the Supreme Dancer, Shiva Natraja. The World of Dance all over the world will miss him hugely.

Deeply saddened by the loss of someone who was such a wonderful human being. I first met him in Hong Kong where he was instrumental in arranging for my first public performance there. Over years there was always a nice note from Carl from wherever he was. I was happy to see him again in Singapore. May his spirit dance forever in minds of his friends. Deep regrets.

Message from Dr Kapila Vatsyayan, who knew Carl and worked with him at various levels for more than four decades:

I am shocked to learn about the sad demise of Carl Wolz. The world of dance has lost a multi-talented dance personality genuinely dedicated to dance. He was a fine dancer and his sensitivity to the art was reflected in his writing. May his soul attain peace in the Dance of Eternity.

It is with profound sadness we all from India express our deep grief for the untimely departure of Carl Wolz. He was a true friend, philosopher and guide to many young dancers and showed them a way to achieve higher goals without being discouraged by obstacles in the way to success. His selfless persuasions to bring both the East and the West dance worlds together will inspire many to strengthen the dance fraternity. We all join in sincere prayer for the departed soul.

On 19 January I got the sad news of Carl's passing away. Sonal Mansingh wrote saying that he has merged with the world of dance where Lord Shiva is dancing eternally.

I had met Carl before the attack on the World Trade Centre at his beautiful apartment near Lincoln Centre and we had talked about the conference to be held in India after Taipei or before. All Carl's friends the world over will dedicate the conferences to the memory of Carl. What a wonderful human being he was! We thank the art of dance for giving him to us — he brought all of us together and his spirit will keep us all united the world over

I have been hesitant to participate in this august exchange of consolatory messages. I too am not one who would say I knew him profoundly or over extended time. I first met him when he visited the National Centre for Performing Arts Bombay, in 1987, where, as the head of the dance program there, I was deputed to receive him and show him around. Pretty soon, despite his gentle quiet way, it became very clear that I had met a dance 'heavyweight'.

Since then, we have met casually at conferences, but it is within the Indian dance context, (conferences and informal gatherings in India and New York) that I came to 'know' his kind, but perceptive clarity of vision. Last year he spoke to me at great length about the book he was writing. He said he was researching his family background, including his native American ancestor who had walked and survived one of those punishing historical walks between cities... He seemed to be curious, delighted and grateful to his ancestral family. He enjoyed doing this. As he knew he was ill, I am sure this is part of his preparation too. He seemed serious about it as if he meant it to be published. However there must be several persons close to him who must know what his wishes were on that score.

I am sharing it because although this seems to be a dance oriented exchange, sometimes we are just — human.

I just returned from Taiwan with the committee members of 2003 Conference in Taiwan. It was Carl who prompted me to have this upcoming conference and gave me all of the support to continue to the current stage. We sat in silence to pray for Carl who gave so much to us in Asia since I first met him in 1981. It was the year I left from Cloud Gate with my last dance with the company and with Carl's Labanotation pieces in the production. So much and so sad.

On Monday, February 4, I was in a meeting with the president of the board of a modern dance company in my city, Cleveland, Ohio. He was asking me who was the best person to contact to find out about modern dance companies and choreographers globally, as this company is looking for new works to produce.

Of course, that person was Carl. I told him about Carl and his tireless effort to unite the global dance community and how he brought so many parts of the dance world together.

It seemed auspicious that this conversation was happening within an hour of Carl's memorial service. And, it brought to bear how important the recent communication between so many of his friends has become to carrying on Carl's work.

It was a humbling experience when I assumed Carl's former position as Dean of Dance at the Hong Kong Academy of Performing Arts. Carl was a visionary. He had the ability to make dreams a reality. It occurs to me that maybe with our combined efforts, we could write his story; a book that would contain photographs and interviews with dancers from every aspect of the dance discipline and from all age groups, encompassing the globe. The book would be there for future generations to benefit from his work. What do you think?

First, I would like to echo the recent acknowledgement of Ilene Fox. Her resolute care during this and prior hospitalisations and organisation of Carl's memorial are greatly appreciated by all of us who live so far away!

I was part of Carl's early 'family' in Hawaii in 1962. Reading all the touching remembrances from people about Carl has made me so happy. BUT, Maggi your idea for a collaborative book (or website format for ease of updating information) truly honours and extends Carl's life and work.

Carl was famous for saying, 'Oh, you should contact...!' I still have some of his recommendation lists. I am sure that others do too! In addition to personal remembrances, perhaps there could be a contact list section — an enlarged version of Carl's "address book." What an invaluable resource, not just for us to continue to network in his spirit of unity, it also becomes a template for future generations.

Another thought: we all know how dedicated Carl was to dance notation. If we have a website, it might be possible to lodge clips of his dances in video & notation, along with personal photographs, excerpts from his books, and other memorabilia.

More thoughts?
